

From Safety Training to Employee Success

Industry: Construction

Learners: 3,500

UES, formerly known as Universal Engineering Sciences, provides engineering solutions throughout the United States, including geotechnical engineering, construction materials testing, building code compliance inspections, and more. Much of the rapid growth at UES transpires through mergers and acquisitions, which presents a distinctive challenge to its corporate learning and development team.

“Learning and development are tied to many aspects critical to our business—primarily safety. We strive to ensure everyone from our field technicians to our drillers and lab technicians work and get home safely every day.”

Beth Scheitzach
Director of Training and Development
